

About us

ideas into energy is a non-profit organization that promotes the international spread of sustainable climate change and environmental protection technologies.

We want to promote these new solutions in countries with high application potentials, to help disseminate successful policy instruments, and initiate projects that will strengthen local knowledge capacities.

To accomplish this we conduct studies, carry out research, education and policy advisory projects and organize conferences and workshops to connect the stakeholders involved. We regularly engage in project collaborations with other non-profit organizations, research institutions, public bodies, associations and companies.

It is important to us to initiate and promote projects that will lead to a self-sustaining dissemination of solutions, thereby strengthening local value added and simultaneously contributing to climate and environmental protection and resource efficiency.
